Goals Galore

A year ago questions were being raised about the lack of goals being scored league-wide. This year, they are pouring in and don't seem to be letting up any time soon.

At the break last year, a mere 98 goals had been scored in 40 games. That is a goal ratio of 2.45 goals per game. Move ahead one year and we have 131 goals in just 38 games. That works out to a goal ratio of 3.45, a full goal more per game!

One could be quick to guess that the goalkeeping has taken a step back, but actually most teams return their same gk from last season, and the total amount of shutouts at this point has only dropped from 35 to 28. What has almost completely disappeared, to the delight of most spectators, is the grind it out 0-0 draw. A year ago at this point parents had to sit in wet and cold for eight of these mind-numbing affairs. So far this season there has only been one. Not only are spectators not being forced to find the positives after a goalless draw, they are being treated to all out goal fests. This season there has already been nine games in which the two teams combined for at least five goals, compared to only six a year ago.

After eight games last year 18 goals was top of the heap, 15 the year before, and 18 the year before that. This year a mere 18 goals would rank you fourth at this stage, with 30 being the new benchmark.

Whatever the reason for the goal explosion, it looks certain that 2013 will surpass the current record for this season's senior class of 211 (2010-2013), and that the single team record of 39 held currently by Redwood, will possibly be broken by multiple teams...
