1/24 - Terra Linda (1-8-1) v San Rafael (3-7-0)

Buckle UP

With just two weeks of the regular season remaining, things at the top have become incredibly congested, and the gap between the ins and the outs has grown to seven points.

Starting with the only out that still has a legitimate shot at the playoffs, it was a tough week for San Rafael as they lost an important game v Novato, who they are chasing for the last spot. They claimed nine points from their first five opponents, and if they can match that total Novato will have to find at least two more points to hold onto their playoff spot. Drake too would need one more point to clinch a playoff spot, with a big game against San Rafael coming up.

Having been held again by the Pirates, Marin Catholic's lead at the top is down to just the head to head advantage over Branson. According to MCAL rules, should any teams finish 1st with the same amount of points, Co-Champions would be named, but the seeds for playoffs would be determined by head to head results. With four teams with a legitimate shot at the title still, the last couple of weeks will be full of drama. The only match pitting teams in the top four against each other is this Saturday, when Marin Catholic plays host to Tamalpais. Marin Catholic picked up a 1-0 road victory early in the season, and will look to claim all three points again in their quest for the regular season title. Branson and Redwood have identical schedules the rest of the way, so how the two do against common opponents will dictate where each finishes.

At the moment, should things finish tied amongst teams, MC holds the head to head against Branson and Tam, though Tam can wipe that away with a win at MC this weekend. Branson holds the head to head against Tam, while Redwood holds the head to head against Branson.
