Shaken, Not Stirred

In the past week, in response to a couple of instances in the last calendar year at a select few matches, the Soccer Referee Association made the decision to no longer have their referees take part in the post-game handshakes. The reasoning is based on players/coaches that have been disqualified for their behavior during the post game handshake. So now, rather than continue to teach life lessons and show sportsmanship and respect after matches, we are sacrificing those time honored traditions to fit the needs of the few that can't control themselves.

A former referee and parent had this to say, "When we succumb as a society to the bad actors by letting them dictate our behavior and our actions, we are lost. We teach youth at a young age to respect officials, and if they haven't learned the lesson by the time they are in HS, it is their loss. In my humble opinion, disqualification could be avoided if students took the lesson of good sportsmanship to heart... The life lessons of soccer and any team sport are to compete hard and show good sportsmanship. If players and or coaches can't live up to those responsibilities, they should be weeded out rather than given an excuse not to exhibit them."

At the end of the day, how we conduct ourselves in times of adversity define who we are, so to remove those moments don't really protect us, but rather they stunt our ability to grow...
