Whose Weight Room is Bigger???

If you have ever seen an episode of EA Sports Madden NFL Live, you will recognize the question above as Maurice Jones-Drew's favorite taunt to his opponent, before he looks to make a goal-line play. His point is, our weight room is bigger, so we are stronger, and we are going to push you around and win the battle in the trenches.

While at this stage not much time is being spent in the weight room, the winter season does have it's challenges that do call on the toughness of the players to get them through times of adversity. The teams that handle those times the best, will likely be the ones left standing at the end of the season, battling it out for MCAL supremacy.

The first obstacle is quite simply the weather. Cold and wet could describe many of the league matches so far this season, and battling the elements has certainly tested the players resolve. The wet weather, and time of the year, have led to a higher susceptibility for players getting sick. How the players handle their illnesses, and how they approach taking care of themselves each and every day will have a big impact on who is available for each game.

The change in season, and the overlap with club soccer, has made it almost impossible to play non-league games prior to MCAL play starting. This has meant, with the exception of one week, the only way to get important non-league games scheduled is to play three game weeks. The extra minutes add up, and the players have to pick themselves back up off the mat and get up for another tough MCAL matchup with little rest in between.

Winter season was never going to be easy on the players, and with only a few weeks of the regular season left, the last team standing may be decided by "whose weight room is bigger."
